

The housing prices in metropolitan areas are skyrocketing, making it extremely challenging for me to +afford a decent home.

Real estate agents keep mentioning the rising demand and limited supply as the reason behind the high prices

I heard from friends that buying property in the city is nearly impossible for middle-class families like ours.

Finding an afordable home is becoming really challenging.

I need to explore different financing options,like home loans or mortagage rates.

Maybe buying a slightly older property and renovating it could save som money.

The government should intervene to control these escalating housing prices.

Maybe i should consider moving to a small city where housing is more affordable.

Research extensively online to compare housing prices.

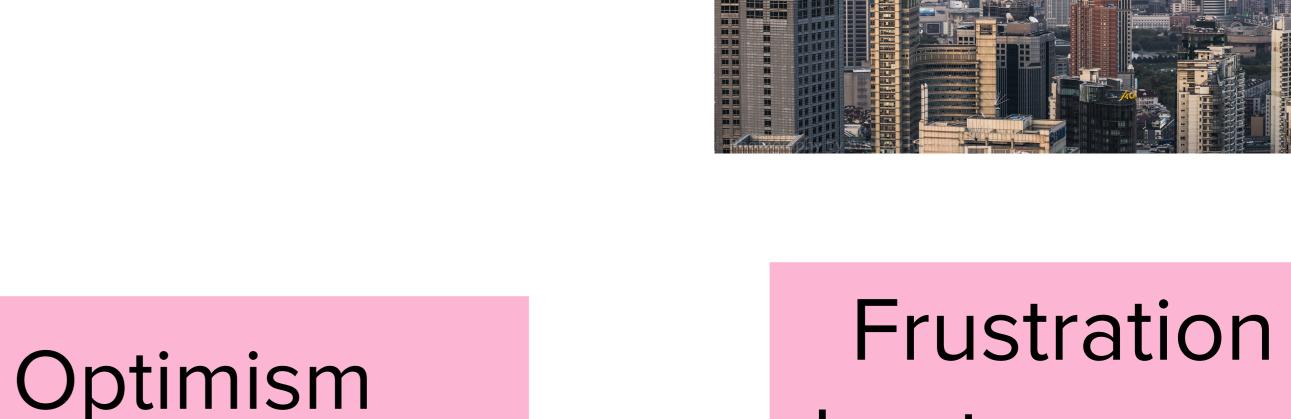

Consider shared housing or rental arrangement due to high prices.

Consider alternative housing arrangements like co-living or renting.

Attend property exhibition or open houses to explore options.
